

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A predetermined information is transmitted to a server system through a computer network from a customer system. In the server system, the predetermined information is received and each information on previously stored component are selectively combined based on the predetermined information to create information concerning combination items. The information concerning the combination items will be transmitted to the customer system via the Internet. In the customer system, the information concerning the combination items is received, a purchase order for the combination items is generated and transmitted to the server system.